The reply of Baron Marschall Von Bieberstein to President Cleveland's message to located and was internally injured. Congress is considered a moderate expression of the government's opinion. The Kreuz Zeitung, the Conservative organ which has been somewhat silent since the disgrace and flight of its former editor, Baron Von Hammerstein, has finally recovered its voice, and in a vigorous editorial says, "Next to the measures dictated by health, we consider that the government must be accorded the right and duty to do everything possible to keep the German market for German cattle. The same applies to American bacon. In both cases German agriculture must claim as a right the enforcement of a policy in its own interests as opposed to those of foreign competitions." The agrarian legislation is significant. A Renewal of Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.-The statement from Berlin that the United States emties as to be obliged practically to suspend business there, should probably be construed to mean that Embassador Runyon will doubtless be found that this matter has already engaged the earnest efforts of many months and, as a matter of fact, the strong reference to bis subject by President Cleveland in his recent message to Congress carries the conviction that

It is regarded here as at least a peculiar coincidence that the German government, while explicitly denying any intention of discriminating against the United States in the matter of life insurance companies and meat products, always in touching upon the subject officially and unofficially make some significant reference to the alleged discrimination practiced by the United States against the German beet sugar.

The Atchison Contracts. CHICAGO, Dec. 14.-A local paper says: The new management of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railway has decided to chise uniform throughout Germany and to cancel on Jan. 1 every contract of every depany. They are to be made over again, as if none of them were in existence. This decision applies to traffic contracts, contracts for supplies, contracts with other corporacontracts of every kind. Wheeler H. Peck-ham, of New York, counsel for the Union Trust Company, holds that the foreclosure sale wiped out everything in the shape of contracts, liabilities, liens and obligations of all kinds, and the purchasers start out entirely fresh and with no entangling alliances of any kind. The first announcement is that the contract with the Pullman combe renewed. The contract with the Wells-Fargo Express Company will be the next one to be abrogated, but it will also be renewed. Then others will come thick and fast, some to be renewed and some not, and out of it all comes the promise of some Brief, Impressive Funeral Services at the Late Home of the "Old Roman." and Only a Prayer at the Tomb.

COLUMBUS, O., Dec. 14.-With simple, yet most solemn and impressive ceremonies, all that is mortal of Allen G. Thurman, the bereaved family in their grief. It was the desire of the deceased that there should be but the simplest exercises when the end came, and, in accordance with this desire, were the arrangements for the ceremony of to-day made. Two years ago when the wife of the venerable statesman was laid to rest, Rev. J. L. Grover conducted the services, and so impressed was Judge Thurman that he secured from the minister a promise that, should fate permit, the same services should be repeated over his re-

The funeral was held at the Thurman residence, at the corner of Rich street and Washington avenue, at 10 o'clock this morning, and even before the appointed | hour the house was surrounded with sorrowing friends who were gathered to pay the last tribute to the memory of the beloved dead. There, mingled together, were the State official and the private citizen, the substantial business man and the mechanic from the humbler walks of life, all come to testify to their appreciation of the sterling qualities and high character of the deceased. The Thurman Club, named for the "Old Roman," and in whose affairs the dead Senator took the greatest interest during his lifetime, met at the clubrooms and marched in a body to the house. Gov. McKinley and the State officials met in accordance with a prearranged plan and together proceeded to the residence, as did permission from Washington, had closed numerous private citizens from every walk of life. The members of the family, the Governor and party, and such of the friends could be accommodated, were admitted the services and then the doors were closed until the brief exercises were concluded. sequies, was a life-long friend of the deceased and is himself bowed under the weight of years, having passed his eightyninth milestone in life's journey, and his white head shook and his voice trembled as ninetieth Psalm and followed it by a brief prayer. The services were the most simple in character, there being no music and consisted of the reading of the Episcopal burial service found in I Corinthians, xv. Following this Rev. Mr. Grover recited the Lord's prayer and then pronounced the any words spoken other than as here in-dicated. Simplicity had been the desire of the dead man regarding the funeral serremains were in a plain black casket, which rested in the archway between the parlor and hall. The features were very life-like, the end having come without the ravages of disease, and there was a calm and peaceful look on the face. For two hours after the services had been concluded a steady stream of people passed through the residence viewing the remains. There were but few floral designs. On the casket were palm leaves, holly and floral designs, the tmost simplicity being observed.

Having consented under pressure to share their grief with the public, during the morning the family was left alone with their dead, after the remains had been viewed. During the afternoon the immediate members of the family of the deceased accompanied the remains to Greenlawn Cemetery, west of the city, where the body body was lowered to its last resting place. Rev. E. L. Rexford, of the First Universalist Church, being the officiating minister. The pallbearers were mostly grandsons and near descendants of the Judge's, as follows: Allen, jr., and Albert Lee Thurman, grandsons; G. Wynne T. Jordon, of Ur-man; McEldine Dun, of Bellefontaine, and John G. Dun, of Columbus, nephews, and Joseph Matthews, the faithful colored body servant, who had been with the Judge during all of his siege of illness. The deceased now rests beside the body of his wife.

MRS. STOWE'S MIND.

A lady who visited Mrs. Isabella Beecher Hooker at her home in Hartford not long ago says: I was sitting in an easy chair in the parlor one morning waiting for my hostess to join me, when an elderly lady, accompanied by a maid, NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 14.—The special walked in whom I at once knew from her picture to be the writer of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and Mrs. Hooker's sister. "Who are you?" inquired Mrs. Stowe, ab-"I am Miss W., of Boston," I replied, rising as politely as I knew how. "Won't you take this chair? It is very comforta-

Mrs. Stowe, who had no book, instantly turned to her and said, rebukingly: 'Why, Isabella! Fled. not flown, Isabella!" The visitor who tells this little experience says the failure of Mrs. Stowe's mind of comfort in life. She frequently visits among the dwellers in what is called the "Literary Settlement" of Hartford, and which consists of the homes of Charles Dudley Warner, his brother, Mr. William Warner, Mark Twain, William Gillette, the author and actor of "The Private Secretary" and "Too Much Johnson," and other people of note, all of whom delight to honor Mrs. Stowe for her past work and achievement for the good of humanity, as well as her literary ability.
